

Russian Jewish Migration Across Borders, Across Time October 15–16, Columbia University

Kraft Center, 5th-floor auditorium
606 W 115th Street, New York, NY

In the nineteenth century Imperial Russia was home to the largest Jewish community in the world. Over the course of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, millions of Russian Jews migrated to new homes scattered throughout the globe transforming the demographic centers of world Jewry. From the United States to Argentina to Palestine, Russian Jewish immigrants transformed the politics and cultures of their new host countries. This conference looks at the various waves of this emigration from Russia in order to ask how singular this population shift is. It will compare it with some other population shifts in the region and will highlight the most recent wave, by looking at the autobiographical materials they have produced.
